TIME TO ME.

Time to me this truth hath taught,
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing,
More offend from want of thought,
Than from any want of feeling.

If advice we would convey
There's a time we should convey it,
If we've but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it.

Many a beauteous flower decays,
Though we tend it ever so much,
Something secret on it preys,
Which no human aid can touch.

So, in many a loving breast,
Lies some canker grief concealed,
That if touched in more oppressed,
Left unto itself—is healed!

Oft unknowingly, the tongue
Touches on a cord so acting,
That a word or accent wrong,
Pains the heart almost to breaking.

Many a tear of wounded pride
Many a fault of human blindness,
Has been soothed, and turned aside,
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Time to me this truth hath taught,
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing,
More offend from want of thought,
Than from any want of feeling.

WOULD BE DRAYMEN CANVOWN.

Of the good things floating about just now in the French papers, the following is a very good specimen —

A hussar is sitting on the summit of a hill overlooking a garrison town. His horse is accoutered near by, he is smoking leisurely and from time to time glancing from the cloud he is made to a big officer envelope he has in his hand. A comrade passes and says —

"What are you doing there?"

"I am beating the king's parade on the French to German, which is does of this morning."

"Well, then, hurry along with it."

"Not much. See there is hardly a soul on the esplanade, and the firing platoon has not yet formed. You surely would not have me rob my appearance of all dramatic effect."

WASHINGTON'S WHITE CHARGERS.

Washington was an excellent horseman. It is said that he could ride at a full gallop and retain a silver dollar between each knee and the saddle, such was the tenacious grasp of his thighs upon the horse. He was very fond of his horses, and liked to see them thoroughly groomed. Mr G W P. Custis states that the night before they were to be used they were entirely covered with a paste, the chief ingredient of which was whiting, and were then completely clothed, and left for the night to sleep on clean straw. By the morning this coating was hard and dry, and it was then brushed and curried off, leaving the hair beneath beautifully white and glossy. After this the hoofs were blackened and polished. To complete this curious toilet the horses' manes were washed, and their teeth picked and washed, when they were considered groomed, and were ready for work.

SUSPICIOUS SOLICITUDE.

Somebody is very industriously at work sending out information about the failure of the silk crop in Italy, China and Japan. Our separate circulars to that effect have been received at this office, two of them being on manifold paper, in the same handwriting, and all of them anonymous. These specimens of literature are very emphatic in warning all growers that, in consequence of the alleged failure of the crop, silk goods are certain to go up in price, and that ladies must hurry up their purchases, etc, etc. All this may be so, but there are several circumstances about the matter calculated to excite suspicion. It is rather surprising that the silk worms should stop spinning simultaneously in countries so widely distant from each other as Italy, China and Japan, and then the succeeding anonymous circulars are distributed look—just like a little perhaps—as if some one in the trade has a large stock of silk goods for which an immediate market is wanted. —Philadelphia Ledger.

CUSTER'S DEFEAT, BY AN EYE-WITNESS.

The first living witness of Custer's massacre has made his appearance in civilization. This interesting personage is an old trapper named Ridge y, who has returned to his home near Minneapolis, and who relates the most thrilling narrative of adventures, having been captured on the plains by Sitting Bull's warriors on the first of April, with several comrades, two of whom were killed. The survivors were taken into the presence of Sitting Bull and questioned as to whence they came. They promptly replied from Fort Garry, whereupon the chief immediately ordered them to be released from their bonds, and afforded them the freedom of the camp on ground of their being British subjects. Ridgely says Sitting Bull's only aim in mustering his warriors was to drive the miners out of the Black Hills, and he had no idea of meeting the soldiers until the United States forces appeared on the Yellowstone and for eight days previous to the fatal precipitation of Custer, mounted couriers from Sitting Bull's camp observed every movement of the approaching army. It was with manifest delight they discovered the enemy dividing their forces, and immediate preparations were made to draw them into ambuscades. The Indian camp was divided by a high ridge, which extended in a southerly direction from the Rosebud, the north end sloping down near by to the banks of the river near a ford. From this hill the Indians watched Custer coming up through the valley following their trail. As Custer approached he only observed twenty-five tepees, which were on one side of the ridge, but behind the point of the ridge were seventy five double tepees, and when Custer commenced his attack on the small village he found himself surrounded by 1,500 to 2,000 warriors ranged in order of battle, and whose movements were executed with military precision. Ridgely stood on the side of a hill in full view of the battle, which was about a mile and a half distant. The fight began in a ravine near the ford, and fully one half the command seemed to be unhorsed at the first fire, and the remainder began to retreat toward a hill in the rear. But their ranks were thinned with astonishing rapidity from a front and flank fire. Custer fell in the middle of the engagement, which began about 11 o'clock and ended in the brief space of forty five minutes. After annihilating the command the victors returned to camp with six soldiers as prisoners, and, intoxicated with joy over their success, they tied these poor fellows to stakes, fixed around a wood pile, and roasted them alive.

While the victims were enduring agonizing tortures, little Indian boys fired arrows heated to a red heat into their quivering flesh until their blackened corpses fell from the stakes. Sitting Bull remarked after the battle that he had killed many soldiers and one camned general.

While the six soldiers were suffering their fiery ordeal the Indian warriors went to drive back another force which was attacking them in the rear. This was about 2 o'clock, and it was unknown to Reno's command driving in their pickets. When the Indians returned to camp in the evening they said the men on the hill "fought like the devil," meaning Reno's soldiers in their entrenchments on the hill. Ridgely says he was not permitted to speak to the six soldiers who were burned, and could not learn who they were. The horses made no statement of their losses, and therefore Ridgely was unable to give any information on this point, except that Reno's men killed more than Custer.

FALL BONNETS.

The fall bonnets have close fitting capotes fronts, with high, pointed crowns. The front or brim is so close that only a slight peating of lace or silk, or else a small twist, is allowed for trimming, with perhaps a little cluster of flowers stuck on the edge of the brim. Many of the high peaked crowns are too pronounce to please ladies of taste, but a happy medium is found in lower tapering crowns that preserve enough of the sharp outline to be stylish. Velvet is assumed for the handsomest material for dress bonnets. Indications are that felt has lost its day of popularity, except for second best bonnets; the coarseness of American felt has brought it into disfavor. There is an effort to revive crush as a fabric for bonnets, but it has not been large y bought by American buyers. Long and ample strings to be tied under the chin will be found on most imported bonnets. These strings are of the ribbons known to milliners as Nos 16 and 22. The handsomest ribbons are gros grain on one side and satin on the other. —Harper's Bazar

IRELAND'S DAY BEGINNING TO DAWN.

Ireland seems as if Ireland's day had begun to dawn at last, and that, too, when other countries are in throes. An Irish land ord, writing in Fraser's Magazine says that "there never was a time in the memory of any one living when Irish tenants were making so much money, or rents were so well paid." A few days ago two hundred laborers here were engaged for Scotland, and if things continue as they are the Green Isle has a good chance of getting her own again. The truth is that Mr. Gladstone's measures for the amelioration of that country are now beginning to bear fruit, and it is an ugly and unwelcome reflection for Englishmen that the abolition of the state church, and, what was a far greater relief, the securing to the tenant of an interest in improvements effected during tenancy, owed if not their origin, certainly their completion, to the Fenian outbreak of 1867-8, in which the men who have just reached the years of participated. This movement gave Mr Gladstone the excuse for insisting on the necessity of radical legislation, which otherwise he could not possibly have accomplished. —N Y Sun.

HARD WORK FOR VETERANS

Major T J Grady, a war Democrat and veteran, of Albany, New York, has just been elected President of a Tilden Club, and in a letter to ex Mayor Perry, President of the Club, defines the position as follows —

"I always have been a Democrat, and have not been accustomed to boting regular nominations, but have also been a Union soldier, and may as well confess that I find it very difficult to work up any great degree of enthusiasm for a Presidential candidate who pronounced the war for the Union a "disgrace," a "failure," and who did all he could to discourage enlistments to the army in the field. As a war Democrat I claim the right to vote for a patriotic and honest Union soldier in preference to a man whose selfishness and partisanship have always been more conspicuous than his patriotism, and I claim further that I do not forget my rights as a member of the Democratic party by doing so."

HOW LINCOLN FORGAVE HIM.

An editor of a weekly paper published in a little village in Missouri called at the White House and was admitted to Mr Lincoln's presence. He told Mr Lincoln that he was the man who first suggested his name for the Presidency, and pulling from his pocket an old, defaced copy of his paper, exhibited an item on the subject. "Do you really think," said Mr Lincoln, "that announcement was the cause of my nomination?" "Certainly," said the editor, "the suggestion was so opportune that it was at once taken up by the other papers, and the result was your nomination."

"Ah, well," said Mr Lincoln with a sigh, and assuming a rather gloomy countenance, "I am glad to see you and know this, but you will have to excuse me, I am just going over to the War Department to see Mr. Stanton." "Well," said the editor, "I will walk over with you." The President, with the apt good nature so characteristic of him, took his hat and said, "Come along."

When they reached the door of the Secretary's office, Mr Lincoln turned to his companion and said: "I shall have to see Mr Stanton alone, and you must excuse me," and taking him by the hand he continued, "Good bye. I hope you will feel perfectly easy about having nominated me; don't be troubled about it; I forgive you."

THE WHITE BEAR AND HIS PREY.

Bruin goes about the islands now and then searching for the eggs of multitudes of gulls, fulmars, eider ducks and auks, that hover about; or he is found making a steady, but precipitate, acquaintance with a seal, and will not hesitate to attack even a walrus. In the water the Ursus Maritimus is not a very expert swimmer, and the seal, if it feels in a humor, will frolic around him and make all sorts of sport, until let U. Maritimus catch Mr. Seal taking a nice nap on a cake of ice, and you will see how successfully and quickly he will corral him. Seals are the principal subsistence of the white bear, and he kills many of them on "fast" ice and now the clumsy wretch even manages to get within arm's length of his prey is a mystery, but when the seals are floating about on loose drift ice, Bruin's little game is obvious enough! He either sees or scents out his prey,—and he is equally good at either,—and then, stooping into the water a mile or so to leeward, he swims slowly and silently toward him, keeping very little of his head above water. On approaching the ice on which the seal is lying, the bear slips along unseen under the edge of it, sometimes it being necessary for him to dive, to avoid being seen, until he is close under the hapless seal, when one jump and one blow from his tremendous paw generally ends the business. It is impossible for the seal to cross to the other side of the iceberg fast enough to avoid being caught by the bear, and his only chance for life is to jump into the very arms of his foe, and carry him into the water. In this manner he may escape, being in his own element, or rather a clumsy and heavy armed foe the bear; and he after has frequently to relinquish his hold of the 600 pounds of struggling seal, only, however, after a desperate effort to retain it. Seals have escaped in this manner, as many have been captured whose limbs were deeply gashed and scored by the claws of bear. The seals, constantly on the alert for gamil Eric, have become uneasy and restless when they are on the ice, rendering their capture by these hunters extremely difficult; whereas in the water they seem to have no fear of man's presence, and will approach the boats within harpooning, and even angling, distance. When there are bears around seals are always difficult to access, and, consequently, the hunter never omits an opportunity of putting a bullet through Bruin's brain, though possession of the body may be impossible.—St. Louis G'obe-Democrat.

Horace Greeley used to tell this story. "I once sent a claim for collection to a Western lawyer, and regarding it as rather a desperate claim, told the attorney if he collected it he might reserve all the amount for his fee. In due time Mr. Greeley received the following laconic epistle: "Dear Sir—I have succeeded in collecting your claim. The balance is hopeless."

RUNNING IN DEBT.

We dwell upon this point, for we would deter others from entering that place of torment. Half the young men in the country, with many old enough to know better, would go into business—that is, into debt,—to morrow, if they could. We poor men are so ignorant as to envy the merchant or manufacturer, whose life is an incessant struggle with pecuniary difficulties, who is driven to constant "shining," and who, from month to month, barely evades the insolvency which sooner or later overtakes most men in business, so that it has been computed that but one man in twenty of them achieve a pecuniary success. For my own part I would rather be a convict in the State Prison, a slave in a rice swamp, than to pass through life under the harrow of debt. Let no man misjudge himself unfortunate, or truly poor, so long as he has the full use of his limbs and faculties, and is substantially free from debt. Hunger, cold, rags, hard work, contempt, suspicion, unjust reproach are disagreeable but debt is infinitely worse than them all. And if it has pleased God to spare either or all of my sons to be the support of my declining years, the lesson which I should most earnestly impress upon them is "never run in debt." Avoid pecuniary obligations as you would pestilence or famine. If you have but fifty cents and can get no more for a week, live a week on fifty cents rather than owe a dollar! Of course I know that some men must do business that involves risk, and must give notes or other obligations, and I do not consider him in debt who can pay his hands directly on the means of paying, at some little sacrifice, all he owes. I speaks of real debt—that which involves risk or sacrifice on future side, obligations and dependence on the other—and I say from all such let youth humbly pray God to preserve him ever more.—Horace Greeley.

ARTISTIC ERRORS AND ANACHRONISMS.

In the works of some of the greatest painters curious and startling anachronisms occur. In their representations we frequently find objects introduced long before the period of their existence, and to bring out an effect historical truth has been in many cases ignored. In this respect, Raphael of Urbino was a great transgressor, he introduces a town standing opposite to Paradise, and a book bound in the neatest possible manner in one of the well known picture of St Jerome, the Sculptor, struck Blind. A host of other artists appear to have believed that the Virgin Mary was in the habit of studying a prayer book, and that the Hebrew kings wore robes similar to those of Henry VIII.

When buttons were invented is a problem that very probably cannot now be solved, but it is a question whether they were used in the days of Isaac. Sir Mandeville, however, evidently thought such to be the case, for in his picture of the sacrifice of Isaiah by the Israelites, he cut off one of the Patriarch's buttons, and not even decorated by a button hole. Lucas van Leyden, too, was likely enough to put a button on the head of Joel the wife of Heber, the Kenite, and no doubt with this he surrounded the edifice with a beautiful gold seed button net of straw. Salvator Rosa is another transgressor in the matter of neckcresses. An exquisite work by his master represents the Baptist preaching in a willow grove, but the whole effect is spoiled by the presence in the background of some jaunty spectators in such hats and flaunting feathers. A Spanish artist represents Abraham as about to shoot Isaac with a pistol. Chillo della Guerra uses a picture of a Madonna painting, and put the finishing touch to a well chosen subject by making the Infant Jesus points the aged Simeon at the Commander in spectacles, and Brughel, in an Adoration of the Magi, introduces the Infant Jesus in a surplice, boots and spurred, which is resembling a model of a room entirely unfurnished with the exception of a wooden horse. Nicholas Poussin's Deluge with boats and steamers, with an eight day clock before him are matters of history, and the nature of the hybrid body in the best painting to Saint Anthony of Padua is scarcely less celebrated.

GENERAL HAYES'S CHILDHOOD

The mother of General Hayes was Sophia Birchard, whose family are removed from Connecticut to Vermont near the close of the last century. She and her husband united with the Presbyterian Church—the Western Puritanism—and their children were reared in that faith, but the sole survivor of her family is now a member of the Episcopal church, none of any other, though a regular attendant with his wife at the Methodist services. Not many years after her husband's death their oldest son was drowned, and there remained to the widowed mother only two children, a boy and a girl, sister, who grew up in a friendship most tender and affectionate on her part and of passionate reverence and admiration on his. In a manuscript memoir of his sister, which must be sacred from more than a passing glance, General Hayes recounts shortly the leading facts of their early childhood in Delaware.

Mrs Hayes dwelt in a substantial brick house in the village, and drew a large part of her income from a farm left her by her husband, in the neighborhood. Besides the guardianship of her brother, she had in the care of her children and house the child of one of those faithful friends whom, in the case of faithful servants, and whom in this case the children both regarded with filial affection, at life in that time and country was necessarily very simple, this family home was for no sense establishment, where the fearful Asenath married and stuck for herself in life, her mother and the sister did all the work of the household themselves. The greatest joys of a happy childhood were the visits the brother and sister made to the farm in the sugar season, in cherry time, at cider making, and when the walnuts and hickory nuts were ripe, and the greatest cross was the want of children's books, with which the village lawyer's family was supplied. When their Uncle Birchard began in business he satisfied their hearts' desire for this kind of literature, and books of a graver and maturer sort seem always to have abounded with them. They read Hume and Smollett's English history together, the sister of twelve years interpreted Shakespeare to the brother of ten, they read the poetry of Mr Thomas Moore (then so much finer and grander than now), and they read Sir Walter Scott the image of dramatizing together in "Lady of the Lake," and were only astonished and dismayed to learn afterwards that they were not the sole inventors of the dramatization of poems—that even their admired "Lady of the Lake" had long been upon the stage. The influence of another sister upon a generous and manly boy is always very great; and it is largely to this sister's unfailing instincts and ardent enthusiasm for books that her brother owes his life-long pleasure in the best literature. She not only read with him, she studied at home the same lessons in Latin and Greek which he recited privately to a gentleman in the place; she longed to be a boy that she might go to college with him; in the futile way she must, go remote from his instruction, she strove to improve herself in drawing and painting. The children were not separated for any length of time until the brother's fourteenth year, when he went away to the Academy at Norwalk, Ohio, and after that they were little together during his preparation for college in Middleton, Connecticut, and his college years at Kenyon College, Ohio. But throughout this time they wrote regularly to each other; she took the deepest interest in all his studies; their devotion affection continued in their maturer life, and whatever cheered and cartered them it left him with a sorrow and irreparable loss.—From Howells' forthcoming Life of General Hayes.

The most interesting to the ethnologists of all the discoveries of Mr Stanley is the place and race of evidently aboriginal Africans, inhabiting the temperate climate of the elevated slopes of the great mountain Gambaragara. Our traveler in exploring says that he has seen some hundreds of these people that they are a hard line race, and some of the women are singularly beautiful, that their hair is kinky, but inclined to brown in color, that they have regular features and thin lips, but that their noses though well shaped, are thick at the point."

There is nothing more bizarre than the way in which many good, sensible people narrow the application to their own uses. They gaze at the chinese bedsteads and say they could never sleep in them, they have no room for the great Mogul, and so they see no purpose in them. If his Exposition does not help us to love the neighbor for beauty's sake, to the useful even when the tools are foreign to our own needs, it has missed one of its greatest purposes, and we will be the worse, for the exhibition.

If there has gotten into our prayer meetings a habit of cant, a perverted sentiment, what we may call sentimentalism, so that religion is conceived of by our young people as simply "Coming to Jesus," rather than coming to righteousness, rather than being honest in trade and regard for others' rights, then we had better change our preaching. And our prayer meeting fashions had better change their manner of praying and exhorting, for we know that religion, when you analyze it down to the last analysis, has but one crystal crisp, and you can see clean through that drop, and it spells out this, "Love."—Golden Rule.

In one of his sermons at the Tabernacle in New York, Mr Moody said: "I heard some years ago of an artist who wanted a model for the Prodigal. He went to many institutions and prisons, but could not get a man who suited his ideas of the Prodigal. One day, however, while walking down the street, he met a poor, miserable tramp, and he suited the artist's eye, so he asked him if he would be willing to sit for his portrait. The tramp said he would, if he would pay him for it. The artist promised, and set a day and hour for him to come. At the appointed time, while the artist was sitting in his studio, the man came in, but he was so well dressed the artist didn't know him, and took him for his appointment with him. When the beggar told him the circumstances, the artist said: "What have you been doing?" "Why," says the man, "I thought if I was going to sit for my portrait I would get a new suit of clothes." "Ah," said the artist, "you won't do; I wanted you just as you were." So, when you go to Christ go just as you are, and he will receive you.

Sanchoni, the historian, says an exchange, is now in the 76th year of his age. He entered college at the early age of thirteen, and graduated four years later with the second honors of his class. His first publication was a volume of poems in 1823. He has an exceedingly valuable and extensive private library, his house being literally packed with books, pamphlets, and papers. There are about 20,000 volumes in all, comprising works in many languages, of all branches of literature and science, from his well known partner to Draper's last. Mr. Sanchoni's library is known so selection, and has few works that are obsolete, or merely ornamental. He is exceedingly fastidious in regard to his surroundings, which are of the richer materials, and of exquisite taste.

THE DAILY GAZETTE AND EL PASO COUNTY NEWS.

Z. A. RISLEY, - - Editor.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1876.

Official Paper of El Paso County.

On account of the press of local matter, we cannot properly omit, we drop for the week, the Republican National and State ticket, anxious as we are, at all times and in any ways, to "keep it before the people."

THE DEATH OF SCHLESINGER.

We publish in full the testimony taken by the coroner's jury and their proceedings and findings in the matter of the death of this ill-fated and unfortunate young man. We have no wish to add to all that is said and revolting in the mysterious and harrowing affair, by any unkind criticism or illnatured comment. A dark cloud in our midst, a murder or a suicide, involving the life of a young man of character and promise, of good business habits and position and pleasant social relations in the community, naturally excites public interest, curiosity, passion and discussion. The facts and circumstances substantially, so far as they could be or have been ascertained, were soon known, weighed and digested, and most people had a theory as to the cause of the death before the determination of the coroner's jury was known. It is not to be disguised that there is much difference of opinion on the subject, and that the finding of five of the jurors that the death was suicidal encounters much and strenuous opposition. No one questions the soundness of the judgment generally, or the purity of the motives of the highly respected citizens who gave patient attention to the investigation which led them to conclude that Schlesinger destroyed his own life. There is only surprise that the evidence tending to that conclusion appeared to them so clear as to admit of no doubt, and to forbid the more charitable, and, to many, the more obvious conclusion that his death was caused by some hand unknown. Such a determination would certainly have been true, for it cannot be said that the evidence was of such a character as that, from it, any one can positively know what hand fired that fatal shot. It would in our judgment have been safer and better, regarding all facts, circumstances, possible future disclosures and the consideration due to the living and the dead.

Dying declarations are regarded in the law as entitled to weight as evidence, and are relied upon to corroborate or establish facts that affect the lives and fortunes of survivors, in criminal suits and in litigation concerning property and civil rights. These were entirely, and as we think unnecessarily, ignored; the best, if not the only, evidence in regard to the manner of his death was rejected, and a conclusion adopted, partly upon the improbability of the opposed theory, partly upon conjecture, and mainly perhaps upon conflicting evidence in regard to the character of the wound, and condition of the skin around it, and rents in the garment, made by the fatal ball, and by experimental shots, which conclusion convicts a mere boy, youthful even for his years, who has maintained a good character among us, not only of self-destruction, but of planning and perpetrating a villainous fraud in regard to it, and going before his God with a lie upon his lips. With our knowledge and views of Mr. Schlesinger, we must reject this conclusion until it is established by evidence of a more positive character than has yet been disclosed.

The real fact may not be known until the time comes when we no longer "see through a glass darkly," but with all possible respect for the gentlemen who made the inquisition, shared in as it is by the entire community, we accept the dying declarations of the heardless and almost friendless boy, that his tragical death was the sequel to some youthful indiscretion, if not something worse, in the foreign land, from whence he came.

THE COLLEGE.

We publish a communication from a trustee, calling attention to the opening of this Institute on the 27th inst., referring to its advantages, and urging its importance to this section of the State, which certainly cannot be overestimated. We cordially concur in all the views and commendations of the trustee, and trust that citizens who have the welfare of the rising generation and the best interests of society at heart, will give the matter earnest and thoughtful consideration. The Institution is in good hands, and its affairs will be conducted with judgment and vigor, and we hope success.

THE Republicans have gained a decisive and sweeping victory in Maine. The State and general election recently held has resulted in the election of all the members in Congress, nearly all the members of the Legislature, and every county in the State returns a Republican for Governor. The majority is not fully ascertained, but will be from 15,000 to 20,000, as against some 3,000 last year, almost up to the old majorities, before the reaction. This result, with the result in the late Vermont election, give certain promise of what those old, reliable States will do in the Presidential election, and may fairly be accepted as an indication that the people are awake to the danger of allowing those who were at least lukewarm in the defense of the government when it was in peril, if not in sympathy with those who were attempting to destroy it, to gain the control of it now.

In the International Rifle Match at Creedmoor on the 14th, at the 800-yard range, the American and Scotch teams tied; the other teams coming in in the following order: Australian, Irish, and Canadian. At 900 yards the score stood: Americans, 515; Australians, 494; Canadians, 465; Irish, 485; Scotch, 462.

We notice in an account of sales of wool in the Boston market, for the week ending Sept 9, that 10,000 lbs Colorado unwashed and unmerchantable fleeces sold at 24 cents, and 5,000 lbs. at 23½ cents; a gratifying advance, and encouraging to our wool-growers.

PETER GOTTESLEBEN, ESQ., who was nominated in the Republican Convention for Regent of the State University, having declined on account of private business engagements, the Central Committee have after consultation with the chairman of the State Democratic Committee substituted Frederick J. Evert, of Arapahoe County, as the Republican candidate.

It is expected that Judge Belford, Gen. Cameron, and Hon. Wm. M. Clark will speak at Monument next Saturday afternoon. In case they do, a car will be attached to the northern bound freight train at this place, which will carry the speakers, the Colorado Springs Cornet Band, the Mayor and Pioneer Greeley Club, and all our citizens who may choose to go.

The Manitou House and the Cliff House are to remain open during the winter.

The fall term of the Deaf-Mute Institute will commence on the 10th of October.

The Rev. Mr. Watson, of Denver, spoke at Unity Hall last Monday evening, on the political issues.

The prisoners in the county jail are all registered and will, it is said, vote the straight Democratic ticket.

The Rev. Dr. Evens, a prominent Chicago minister, will officiate at the Baptist Church to-morrow morning.

J. B. Vanarie, who has been spending a few weeks with his son-in-law, S. J. Caruthers, left on yesterday's train for his home in Olathe, Kansas.

The following are the new rates over the A., T. & S. F. road: To Philadelphia, $83 40; to New York, $84 40. Tickets on sale at the railroad offices.

Mr. Linn, one of the most successful hunters in this section, in company with Mr. Earl brought into town yesterday an enormous yearling elk, weighing 300 pounds.

Wm. M. Ormes, esq., of New York, is at Crawford's, on his way to Georgetown, whither he is going in connection with negotiations for valuable mining property.

Mr. Lennox is the proud father of a little son who is already a weighty member of society and who, we hope, grow up to vote the straight Republican ticket.

The public school at Manitou was reopened, after the summer vacation, on Monday morning with about thirty scholars. Mr. McGuffey, from Philadelphia, is the teacher.

The Congregationalists will not take up their Cross to-morrow, he not having arrived. Rev. E. B. Perkins, Home Missionary, will preach instead. Mrs. D. C. Cravins will assist the choir.

Joseph C. Miller was arrested last Saturday evening in this city, charged with stealing two horses last June from Mrs. Lee, a widow, living in Colorado City. The property has not yet been recovered.

The public school will be re-opened on Monday morning at 9 o'clock. It is requested that all children, who are to attend school during the coming term, may be present on the opening day, when the classes will be arranged.

Mr. Chambers, in passing through the Garden of the Gods yesterday morning, saw two very fine deer on the path, loaming towards the mountains as unconcernedly as if all were as uncivilized as in years gone by.

George Thornton, esq., a prominent citizen of Sandusky, Ohio, with his wife and daughter, are at the Crawford House, looking for a dwelling house. Come to spend the winter for the benefit of the daughter's health.

Messrs. Coates Bros., of Philadelphia, have forwarded us their wool circular for September, from which we extract the following quotations with reference to Colorado and New Mexican wool:

Washed, fine choice selected	23@25
" average grades	19@21
" black	16@17
Unwashed, average grades	18@19
" coarse	17@19

S. P. Rounds, esq., the well known printing press manufacturer, of Chicago, gave us a call this morning. We are pleased to learn that he is building up a good business in this State in the way of supplying it with all the apparatus required in the "art preservative." He stops at Crawford's, but will visit Manitou for a few days. His wife accompanies him.

A two-horse wagon has just come over the Cottonwood road from Lake City. Five others are on the way out, and three wagons have gone from here to Lake City over the same road. This is much better than we had reason to expect, particularly as the road across some two miles of connection. The bulk of the trade of Lake City will undoubtedly come and go over the road when completed, and some work done between Gunnison and Indian creek.

The original town site of Colorado City covered a claim of 1,280 acres of land, and was entered on the records of the El Paso Claim Club, August 13, 1859. In 1860 there were more than 300 houses in the town, and lots went up to $200 each. In 1861 the act organizing the Territory of Colorado was passed—the first Legislature meeting in Denver. One of its earliest enactments located the capital at Colorado City, and in 1862 the members of the Legislature met at that place, but immediately changed the capital to Denver, and adjourned thither. It will doubtless be but a few years before the people of El Paso county will see the capital again located within its borders.

As an encouraging sign of the times we note the fact that our city is filling up, and really desirable houses for rent are becoming scarce. It is true that prices are much lower than they have been heretofore, which is now the case over the entire country; but if there is a steady and healthy demand for desirable property for renting, there can be no longer any doubt. The poorer and cheaper class of tenements are not sought after, but good property will rent now at fair figures. One of our real estate agents, Mr. Hallowell, informed us that he had sold several properties recently; one a large house on Nevada avenue to a gentleman from Fairplay, who brings his family down about the first of November to make his home here. Mr. Hallowell also stated that he had rented and leased twelve or fifteen houses within the past week or two, mostly to families coming in from the mining districts. Our city is without question the most pleasant place of residence in the State, either for summer or winter; but especially at this season of the year may we expect an influx of people seeking a comfortable winter home.

The Congregational Church will welcome their new pastor, Mr. Cross, on Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, at Unity Hall. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

We were favored with a call, on Thursday, from Mr. Henry Wood, proprietor of the Canal mills, Cincinnati, who has come to spend a few months for health and recreation in Colorado.

We learn from an English paper that Mr. Walter Paris, who is spoken of as "a pupil of the late Mr. Rowbotham, the water color painter," has lately returned from the United States with a series of sketches of American scenery. Mr. Paris resided here for some time, and has, no doubt, many views of Colorado in his portfolio.

Two important transfers of real estate have taken place during the last week. D. Russ Wood, Jesse, has sold the house and lots on Nevada avenue known as the "West property," at a fair price, and Julius Way has purchased lots 10, 11 and 12 in block 73, Colorado Springs, of Silas Axtell, for the consideration of $2,000.

During the week the Board of Registration, consisting of H. R. Kennedy, Giles Crissey and C. W. Barton, have been in session at the Engine House registering the names of those who will participate in the approaching contest. The board will meet again on the 26th inst., the Tuesday before the election, to revise their lists and enroll the names of any legal applicants for registration not already registered.

S. E. Sessions met with a serious accident on Wednesday afternoon, while at work on the new barn which he is putting up for Col. Bacon. He was working on the roof, when his foot slipped, owing to some boards giving way, and he fell to the ground, a distance of twelve or fourteen feet, striking on his head. Mr. Sessions was of course severely hurt, but is now recovering rapidly and hopes to be at work again in a few days.

Excellent and intelligent ladies of the city of Buffalo, N. Y., and there are many such, and none more excellent and intelligent in any city, manage a HOME FOR THE FRIENDLESS, and publish an interesting and handsome monthly Record of their proceedings, now in its eighth volume, from which we copy with price and satisfaction a complimentary notice of the GAZETTE, omitting a flattering personal commendation for which we are duly grateful:

"We are in receipt of the Colorado Springs GAZETTE, a paper published in Colorado Springs, Col. The editor, a man well known in political and social circles, both here and in Washington. . . . . The quality of the paper on which it is printed quite puts the straw paper of our dailies to the blush, and the general style and 'get up' would do credit to a New York journal. Anything which opens up this great western country and makes us better acquainted with its magnificent scenery, immense mineral wealth, and rapid growth in population, is most interesting to eastern readers, who can yet scarcely credit the glories of natural scenery so far removed; the wonderful cañons, the towering mountains, the loveliness of Manitou, or the extent and culture of the society which has thus suddenly grown up in the wilderness."

ABOUT THE PEOPLE.

Mr. N. Hodgman returned from the East on the Wednesday afternoon train.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Macomber returned from their eastern trip on Saturday evening.

W. S. Jackson, esq., will probably arrive here from Philadelphia some time next week.

Gen. W. J. Palmer is expected to arrive here to-morrow morning, via Denver, from Philadelphia.

Mrs. Channing Sweet is spending a few weeks in South Park, at the residence of her brother, Mr. H. H. Stevens.

Mr. A. Sagendorph has just returned from Middle Park, where he has been rusticating and recuiting his health after his severe illness. Mr. Sagendorph is once more able to take an active part in business.

Judge E. B. McTerran is at Fairplay, examining his mines and making arrangements for the completion and running of a smelter in that vicinity. He is expected back next Tuesday or Wednesday.

During the week Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Chase, Miss Ada Aldrich, Miss Mary Sebastian, Miss Florence Conant, and Messrs. Chas. M. Hobbs, W. H. Bacon and J. H. O'Keefe, made the ascent of Pike's Peak. They were overtaken by a dense fog, and had it not been for Mr. O'Keefe's thorough knowledge of the trail, the pressure of time might have been serious and indirect.

James Duncan has gone to Pueblo for a few days.

Mrs. Copley returned yesterday from her visit to the Lake House.

S. M. Sanders left for the Centennial last Tuesday evening and expects to be absent about six weeks.

Mr. Jeffray goes east next Monday to look at the Centennial Exposition, and purchase a new stock of goods.

Mrs. A. E. Barrett returned home from an extended visit to friends in New Eng and and a look at the Centennial Exhibition, on Saturday evening last.

Mr. Marks left on Wednesday evening to pay a visit to old friends in the East and take a look at the great exhibition. He expects to return in about two months.

Matt. France will return home from San Juan about the first of October. He has been superintending the work on the Silver Wing property, located in Eureka Gulch.

Mr. R. Leonard, of the firm of B. Leonard & Co., will leave for the East in about two weeks, for the purpose of laying in a large stock of clothing and furnishing goods.

Mrs. Jas. Barnes and children, Miss Dodridge, Miss Etta Barnes and Mrs. Latham and daughter, leave on to-day's train for a visit to the East, and will return to their beautiful home here before cold weather sets in.

Mrs. M. E. Edwards, accompanied by little Willie Culver, has been visiting her sister in the mountains beyond South Park, for the benefit of the little boy's health and for pleasure. They are expected to return the latter part of next week.

G. S. Barnes and Judge Pierce are up in the mountains visiting the different mining towns and spending a few days at Twin Lakes. They will return to Colorado Springs during the coming week.

A camping party consisting of Messrs. Fairfield, Yates, Tribe, Robinson and Donavan, returned home last Thursday afternoon. They pitched camp, among other places, at the head of Beaver creek, Cañon City, Grand Cañon of the Arkansas, and the Goodnight Hot and Sulphur Springs, making a round trip of about 200 miles.

IMPORTANT COMMERCIAL NOTES.

Charles Stearns is daily expecting a large invoice of cloths, cassimeres, and suitings, which he will make up in first-class style at prices as low as can be procured at any of the best Eastern houses. Call early, make your selection, and give him your measure before all the choice patterns are taken.

You might make bricks without straw, but you can't succeed in business without advertising.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and certainly the removal of the post office has enabled Tribe & Jeffray to make a great improvement in the appearance of their place of business. They have enlarged and beautified it until they have one of the neatest of new stores.

Passing up Tejon Street yesterday morning, we saw one of our business men fast asleep in his store. That gentleman does not advertise.

We call attention to the card of R. H. Buckingham, published in another column. Mr. Buckingham has secured the services of one of the finest bookmakers in the country, and invites the citizens of Colorado Springs to call upon him and leave their orders.

Pratt & Morley's miscellaneous stock, some second hand goods, and much of it new, especially in the stove and hardware line, continues to attract attention. It is growing into one of the institutions of our town.

Strangers requiring burial cases and caskets need not go abroad, but will find them in a variety, silver-mounted and plain, of different material and most approved form and pattern, at Hodgman & Co.'s, on Huerfano street, near Tejon, in this city.

The rivalry between our two most extensive hardware dealers, Mr. Barnes and Messrs. Chase & Gardner, on Tejon street, continues, and inures to the benefit of purchasers. Now is the time to buy. Both of them have large stocks in their line, of excellent quality, and are selling at reduced prices.

TO THE PUBLIC.

In the Rocky Mountain News of the 12th inst. there appeared a letter from Colorado Springs, commenting severely upon the conduct of the Sheriff, in refusing to follow a supposed due to the legal murderer or murderers of A. P. L. Schlesinger, who it has since been found by the coroner's jury, committed suicide. This letter was signed by "Justice,"—the same justice that is proverbially blind, I presume, inasmuch as in this case he seems to have "gone it blind" completely, in his judgment, his knowledge, and his conclusions.

This desire to be sensational, the sweetly critcises "the unaccountable apathy of the officers of justice in this county in regard to this so far mysterious crime." It was assumed at the beginning of the investigation that Schlesinger had fallen in a duel, the basis for which assumption you have a ready in the letters produced at the coroner's inquest, and previous communications of the deceased.

It was stated that Schlesinger had been a participant in a duel in France some years since and that he had been followed over the seas by his enemy, thirsting for his blood. This seems highly probable in view of the immature age of the victim, scarce nineteen years.

"Justice" assails the Sheriff for not following a clue founded upon rumor, that buggy tracks were discovered near the scene of the tragedy, and the statement that a Mexican sheep herder had seen a buggy going south with two horses attached, and two men in it. This Mexican was subsequently brought in and testified before the coroner's jury, that he knew nothing of the affair and had seen nothing whatever, excepting a wagon containing two men which passed two days before this bloody occurrence.

The Sheriff consulted with other county officials with regard to following the mythical buggy and was confirmed in his opinion that the county would not justify or sustain him in the necessary expense attendant upon a pursuit.

In regard to the guarantee of several men that the county would pay the expenses of following the shadowy occupants of the phantom buggy and their mysterious accomplices, the Sheriff agreed to follow this guarantee and follow the clue, provided the guarantors would put their subscription in a responsible shape, as journals of the character cannot be made without available means, in default of which the alternative would be a sharp pursuit on foot, and as Secretary Chase runs, "a stern chase is a long chase," I leave it to our mathematical celebrities to determine when I could expect to overtake my object, with provision and substantial means thinner even than our famous Colorado atmosphere.

Upon submitting this amendment to the proposition of our enthusiastic friends of Justice, their ardor cooled very suddenly and perceptibly, or they were unable to comply with the condition, and fell back upon their personal assurance that the friends of Schlesinger in the East would give two thousand dollars for the capture of the murderers. This assurance was made upon their personal acquaintance with and knowledge of these Eastern parties. Now as to this personal knowledge and intimate acquaintance with the Eastern friends, and the justification for this assurance. These same guarantors telegraphed to the parties East a statement of the affair, and the confidence of these Eastern friends in our guarantors was so complete and implicit that they replied, stating that they doubted their veracity, evidently considering it a preconcerted plan, a "put up job," for some unlawful or unrighteous purpose not made apparent, and afterwards despatched to other parties here to know if there was any foundation in fact for the report. So much for the responsibility of these responsible guarantors! "Justice" could scarcely write his sensational criticism and attack while laboring under great mental excitement, but if the sheriff had entailed the expense of the wished-for pursuit upon the county it is more than probable that impartial "Justice" would have been among the first to condemn him for saddling any additional burden upon the county without authority.

When occasion again reminds that "Justice" should attack an official for neglect of duty, let him first make himself conversant with the facts, the law, and the duties of such official, as legally authorized, and he may conclude that a proper vigilance and a becoming discretion and judgment have been exercised.

PETER BECKER,
Sheriff of El Paso County, Colorado.

POLITICAL REMINISCENCES—IV.

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

Until the close of the war the lines which divided the two great political parties were clear, distinct, and well defined, so that any person of ordinary intelligence could tell why he was a Republican, or why he was a Democrat.

The result of the war broke down all opposition to the principles of the Republican party; every distinct principle of the Democratic party was abandoned, and the decisions of the people promptly acquiesced in. So complete were the old party lines obliterated that in 1868 the Republican party nominated for its candidate a man who had never cast any but a Democratic vote.

The opposition, in 1868, under Seymour, retained the name Democrat, which the copperheads during the war had made odious, but not one of the old principles at issue with the Republican party remained.

In 1872 so completely had the Democratic party been defeated that the opposition to the Republican administration nominated that old war horse, anti-slavery, free soil Republican, Horace Greeley, as its candidate for President, and were defeated.

The history of all governments has shown that when one party or dynasty for a long time has all power, that more or less of bad men, corrupt men, have attained to places of great influence and power, and inaugurated bad and corrupt measures, and grown corrupt and overbearing. This is true of all associations of church or state. Another thing is equally true that if such associations, before the whole body becomes diseased and corrupt, can use all their recuperative power to purify and heal it they will be successful.

The Democratic party substantially held the ruling administration from 1828 to 1860, only two short intervals intervening, the administration of Gen. Harrison, of only one month, and Gen. Taylor, about thirteen months. Both administrations were substantially Democratic after the death of these presidents; corruption increased year by year so that there is no doubt but whoever reads history at the next Centennial, will find it recorded that at the close of Buchanan's administration in 1861, the Democratic party was corrupt in every limb, and patriotism from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, and well nigh caused the death of the best government on which the sun ever shone.

The Republican party was born in 1856, with high, noble and patriotic principles, a party pure as the crystal streams which flow from our mountain ranges, a party I believe raised up by God to save this nation in the terrible conflict which was then at the very threshold of the nation—a mission which it gloriously accomplished. As the party increased in strength bad men, corrupt men, joined it and some of them attained places of honor and trust to the injuring of the good influence of the party. What shall be done?

If a good ship, through a long, terrible and tempestuous voyage, is found, before reaching her harbor to sail slow and sluggish—to be hard for her pilot to direct her course—if she comes into port having brought everything in safety, not a life or package lost, will her owner condemn and abandon her? No, rather put her into dry dock and thoroughly examine her, and if he finds her timbers all sound but a few rotten planks, some blank, a little shaky, some a good deal worm-eaten, and her bottom badly covered with barnacles, he has the barnacles scraped off, the poor planks removed and in their place puts good sound live oak, sets her afloat again, she is good as new, ready for a ocean's hardest storms.

Such is the Republican party to-day. Last Summer she went into dry docks, her barnacles are all scraped off, her planks now are all sound, she is ready for the conflict to fight for the same principles to-day that she did from 1861 to 1865, only the weapons of her warfare are now ballots instead of bayonets and bullets then. The Republican party held its convention, laid down its platform of principles, and nominated Gen. Hayes as its candidate for president. Gen. Hayes in his letter of acceptance is explicit and remarkable for the clearness of his expressions. His language is simple, it can be construed to mean on y one thing, so simple an unlearned man fully understands the meaning of every word, and yet so full are the words used, the most earnest are satisfied; he says what he means and means just what he says and no more.

The party of opposition to the rebellion, the party calling itself the Democratic party, also held its convention and laid down its platform, and it will be hard to find a thing in their platform which is opposed to any principle of government laid down in the Republican platform; the only issue we can find is in the men to protect and carry out those principles. They issued a long and worry platform and their candidate for President, a long time after his nomination, published his letter of acceptance—a mountain of words which may be so read as to mean any thing the reader wants them to mean. A person needs to have an encyclopedia at his hand to find out the meaning of some of them; a common dictionary would not be sufficient. Of one hundred persons who read it carefully probably not two out of the hundred will agree as to the meaning of the whole letter, while of one hundred reading Gov. Hayes's letter every one of the hundred will agree as to the meaning of every word. Read what Tilden says about civil service reform and he tells you what he means.

"The public interest in an honest, skillful performance of official trust must not be sacrificed (very plausible so far, now comes the buzzer) to the usufruct of the incumbent." "Usufruct of the incumbent!" What in the United States of America is "usufruct?" Oh, now I guess I know what "usufruct" is like. It is like that hunter's rifle of which I will tell the story. I can't tell a story very well, but will tell this the best I can as "usufruct" must be something like the hunter's rifle.

A hunter was exhausting his rifle to a friend, telling him how sure he could bring down his game every time, and inviting him to go with him to the mountains in a day and witness the wonderful shots he would make if opportunity presented itself. So they started for the mountains, and had not proceeded far in one of the cañons when the friend said "Stop, look yonder in that clump of bushes about 200 yards off, do you not see something there?"

"Yes," says the hunter; "it is a black bear; keep still and I will show you what my rifle will do."

The friend looked the hunter in the face, looked down the barrel of the rifle, and, when out from the bushes leaped a black bear, not a hair injured. Said the hunter's friend:—

"How is this? The bear ain't touched."

"How is this!" answered the hunter; "I tell you it's all right. The rifle was adapted to hit if it was a bear and to miss if it was a cat!"

That was a "usufruct" rifle. ****

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

SHALL OUR COLLEGE BE SUSTAINED.

The College has been located at Colorado Springs under the impression that it was both needed and desired for the education of our youth in the higher branches of a liberal education, and for the general benefit of the people now rapidly flocking in to Southern Colorado. No such institution of learning now exists south of the Divide, none within six hundred miles east of us, and none for the vast regions to the west, soon to embrace a large minority, if not a majority, of the population of our Centennial State. Colorado Springs has more desirable advantages of situation and surroundings than any other town in Southern Colorado for such an institution. Its permanent establishment here will do more to give popularity and prosperity to the town than any other enterprise that has at present any show of success. Shall it be sustained? A very competent gentleman, whose testimony is say of him, "he will bear out any recommendations you may put upon him," is expected to assume the charge and open the term for instruction on the 27th inst. If in consequence of the hard times and the scarcity of money the College shall fail to receive the patronage of the citizens, the effect will be to dishearten both the instructors and the trustees, and render the future success of the enterprise at least problematical. But if, on the other hand, the people of Colorado Springs will now rally to its support, it is believed that the negotiations now in progress between the trustees and gentlemen at the East, who are deeply interested in Colorado and its educational interests, will result in placing the College on a permanent foundation.

Shall it be done? A TRUSTEE.

A private letter received from a valued friend who has recently paid us a visit gives such a pleasant account of Colorado Springs and the journey to Denver, that we have taken the liberty of giving it to our readers.

I don't feel as if I had sufficiently done Colorado Springs to write intelligently about it, but I think it the prettiest town I have seen in Colorado as regards situation, neatness, breadth of streets, elegance of dwellings and public buildings, prettiness of trees, and the beauty and grandeur of its surroundings, and the general tone and character of the place and people seemed considerably higher than what I had met in other parts of the State. On my journey homeward, to wile away the time I took a few notes of the road and forcibly objects and scenery.

Whilst the train was waiting I sat looking towards Pike's Peak, with its base of red porphyry shrouded by a beautiful white cloud hanging just under its brow, and this with the foreground of white and red sandstone of the Garden of the Gods, and the bit of green prairie with beautiful trumpet flowers of the huge rooted hypomoea (potato vine) in bloom made a lovely picture. My friend in the next seat seemed to partake the inspiration and expressed himself with a mixture of romance and sensibility, "How these mountains loom up into the heavens, don't they? Jim, give us a plug of tobacco!"

The train moved on, and we bade adieu to Glen Eyrie with its strange columns of sandstone that one feels so nervous in driving under lest they should fall, the lodge, which in England would be the gamekeeper's, the little "preserve" inside, with its rabbits among the fern, the eagle's eyrie on the cliff that looks as if it had hung there undisturbed for ages, the chateau with its fountains, flower beds, and elegant rooms decorated almost into a museum with native elk, deer, and mountain sheep heads and horns, a which left in my mind a strange impression as if I had been on a dream voyage somewhere in England and France at the same moment, while Manitou with its Swiss cottages and talk of mountain climbing and excursions carried me to Switzerland; and then those marvelous red rocks of the Garden of the Gods, with their natural gravel path passing between fiery red gates and strange, huge, unearthly shapes suggested nothing we had ever seen in any country.

We left Colorado Springs like one waking out of a strange, beautiful dream. Our impressions of the resemblance to England and Eastern scenery were deepened as we rode on. The timber dapplied prairie and meadow with its patches of scrub oak, and neat fields reminded us all the time of English country and park scenery, only that here and there would crop out among the foliage those strange white monuments of sandstone, and castellated hillocks, a that is left by the waste of time and the wear of water of former forty and continuous terraces of sandstone.

Now the scene changes for a bright blue lake covered with flowering rushes. Then English and New England meadows suddenly change again for roling prairie, and we are back in Colorado again. Now it changes again for isolated mills surmounted with castellated sandstone, and we think of Norman castles, the moat and the draw-bridge and the keep of our feudal times, and unconcernedly the protection of one of these sandstone fortresses of Nature, nestles the village of Castle Rock, its white and yellow houses flashing in the sun.

Now a glimpse of distant blue mountains with Long's Peak above them, and soon the long crescent of purple ranges, with the sun setting behind them, throwing its last long ray of streaming light over the soft waves of the prairie till it reaches a meadow of sunflowers and turns it into the blaze of the "field of the cloth of gold," then sinks behind the sharply-defined outline of the peaks, leaving dark clouds—those "looming bastions fringed with fire"—to mark the place where it sank, soft blue mists creep over the meadow and brood over the river as the short twilight of a balmy Colorado evening settles down over mountain and prairie.

"Check your baggage! Omnibus, sir?" and we wake from our reveries to find ourselves in Denver.

M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

The officers and teachers of the M. E. Sunday School, remembering when they occupied their places in the classes, instead of official positions, and with what joy they always hailed the annual picnic, resolved upon giving their scholars a day in the mountains, which they did on Thursday last. The scholars and their friends to the number of about 120, occupying three full coaches, on the D. & R. G. railway, left the depot at 10 o'clock, and after a quick and delightful ride arrived at the Divide station about noon, and were soon gathered in the beautiful pine grove about a half mile from the depot. The first thing in order was to supply the inner man of the little folks, which was done in good style around a large table at which all the scholars joined in having their dinner, after which swings and games of all kinds were proposed. The scholars then broke in all directions—some going up in the cañon, others over the mountains—and finally met at the lake and took advantage of that beautiful sheet of water, and spent the rest of the day in the boats rowing and sailing, under the guidance of their live pastor, Mr. Bodget, who proved himself as big a boy as there was in the crowd. At half past 5 the whistle sounded and the train started for home, arriving at half past 6, without an accident of any kind occurring to mar the pleasure of the day. On every side were heard loud expressions of joy and happiness over the day's pleasure, and scholars, teachers and friends were unanimous in pronouncing the picnic a success in every particular.

DECATUR, MICH., Sept. 11, 1876.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

I want to tell you a little about the Centennial. Let us imagine ourselves at the entrance of the exhibition grounds at Philadelphia for an hour or so and may be we shall get a more vivid idea of what is there. Before us, then, is the main building, nearly all glass and iron, and covering about twenty acres of land, I believe. You and I will not stop there except to pay our half dollar (not two quarters, nor five dimes, nor ten nickels), but we shall go through the main building, out upon Belmont avenue, and going north we shall pass by and by reach the Kansas and Colorado building. Let us go in at once and register on the Colorado book and then look right on the wall over the register. What? As sure as you live there is the Colorado Springs school house! It is the largest picture and I am not sure but the best one of all the photographs of the Colorado educational buildings. It is in the center of the frame, and such small towns as Boulder and Denver and Golden and Pueblo have their little pictures arranged very appropriately on the side of ours. Then turn to the left. The finest piece of work in this whole building is before you. You recognize at once Mr. Ege's workmanship in the beautiful mineral cabinet before you. It is not well advertised. There ought to be a large card, printed at the GAZETTE office in good style showing what it is, where it was made, of what material, and how it was constructed and what it contains. One little lad says it was "sent by Mr. Macalister, Co Sos." Pshaw!

Now we sit down a moment and read the Mountaineer; it lies on the table. We get the Colorado Springs news and go over to see the birds and animals which Mrs. Maxwell, of Denver, has on exhibition. They make up a fine collection. Everybody goes to see them and then everybody sees the cabinet, the precious stones, the mineral specimens and that immense block of coal from Cañon City. Everybody says, and the newspapers all repeat it, that the Kansas and Colorado exhibition is by far the finest on the grounds.

The next place is the Women's Pavilion. A woman runs a newspaper, a girl sends telegrams, another sets type, two or three are weaving with power-looms run by a steam engine of which a young lady is the engineer. Another woman has actually made a whistle out of a pig's tail, another has made a beautiful female head using only butter as a material. You would never guess it was butter. It looks like an elegant carving in amber. And the pictures and quilts and statues and needle-work and knit goods, etc., etc., astonish and bewilder you with their beauty and number.

I know where you would like to go now—Machinery Hall. See that machine pick up a piece of paper. (I guess you could pick it up quick too if you had mucilage on the ends of your fingers as the machine has.) Well, but look! Before you know what is going to be done with that paper it is out of sight, going through a rectangular hole and on the other side it comes out an envelope and then it crops square by another excepting that half an inch sticks out. So they go on, another and another, a having only a half inch protruding. No hands touch them but you see them moving away and running under a mucilage brush that is fixed under a revolving cylinder. The brush dips at the bottom of the revolution into a mucilage pot, and at the top runs the sticky stuff on the envelopes. Hark, what's that? Plantation songs in Machinery Hall? Let us go nearer. A dozen darkies are making tobacco into all the shapes in which it is used, and as they manufacture it they sing "Aunt Jemima Carline," "Angels a-waitin' on de water," and "Afore the Heaven gates close."

Look at that machine print you a letter a most as fast as you can write it. See that one make a candy, and there is a drill, diamond-pointed, that will prospect in granite ten feet deep in an hour. Yonder is a loom weaving silk balloons with pretty pictures on them, and at that long table they are making watches by machinery. But we cannot stop to see it all in an hour. We haven't begun to see Machinery Hall. The Art Gallery and its annex will please you; so will the Government building. Look at your watches; we came here at nine o'clock. It is now half past two and you did not know it was dinner-time yet. Let us go to the dairy and get some bread and milk. Good-bye.

L. G. A. COPLEY.

C. S. T. Chalice has rented one of the stores in the Wanless block, and will to-day open with a full assortment of boots and shoes.

INQUEST UPON THE BODY OF A. L. SCHLESINGER—R. T. TAYLOR, Coroner

Sunday, Sept 11, 1876.

The jury was composed of the following gentlemen: Wm Wagner, Dr. Palmer, M. DeCoursey, W. Macomber, B. F. Crowe, and Henry McAllister, who were duly sworn. The coroner appointed Wm Wagner chairman.

The jury examined the body carefully, found that the man had entered the right side three inches external and downward from the right nipple, the ball puncturing the 9th rib on the left side, cutting it in two about an inch between the vertebra and the costal cartilage, about two inches below the lateral measuring from course of 11 inches the distance 3 inches.

DR. REED'S TESTIMONY

H. A. Reed sworn: Was called on Sunday, Dr. Solly at my house and asked me to examine a wound. I saw letters in the wound. Mr. Schlesinger and signature by him. One of the letters came out with a pocket knife. Turned over to Dr. Solly, turned the other, both under a letter addressed to the right side. Took the body to the house. Found the ball in the right side. Concluded death was instantaneous. Arrived there about 12 o'clock. Found the body cold. Turned body over. Two balls found and line of wound. Concluded death was instantaneous. Arrived at 12 o'clock. Found the body cold. Turned over. Two balls found. Concluded death was instantaneous.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The Sun says one dealer in Greeley has stored up 2,000 hides.

The Douglas County News has changed hands, T. S. Harris succeeding E. H. Sturdy.

Down the Platte they have commenced threshing the wheat, and so far the quality is excellent.

A party of Greeley ladies who endeavored to ascend Long's Peak were turned back by a heavy snow storm.—Sun.

Joseph Hutchinson is the Democratic candidate for State Senator to represent the counties of Saguache and Lake.

Jarvis Hall College commenced its fall term on the 6th with a good showing of students and brilliant prospects of success.

Mr. Grant's Sensloa Mine on Sosmon Mountain is a veritable bonanza. The mill assays show 585 ounces of silver.—Miner.

The train for Canon City will leave the Denver and Rio Grande depot at Pueblo hereafter at 8 o'clock a. m. instead of at night.

Mr. W. Cline has been appointed postmaster at Ouray, San Juan County, and David Mack postmaster at Los Animas, Saguache County.

The Piqua Ore Company's works at Montgomery, will be in readiness for the treatment of ores two weeks hence.—Fairplay Sentinel.

The Saguache Chronicle says there will be a meeting of the miners on Burnt and Christonia creeks to organize a new mining district there.

The Saguache Chronicle is informed that a new town has been laid off four miles below Lake City, at which place Mr. and Mrs. Stewart purpose putting up a smelter.

At Ralston Creek a little boy nearly six years of age, while driving up the cows one evening lately, was bitten in the right foot by a rattle snake, and died the same evening.

Hon. Henry Henson is the Republican nominee for State Senator for the Senatorial District, comprised of the counties of Rio Grande, Hinsdale, San Juan and La Plata.

The fine hotel, erected at Lo ant, and a part of the property of the Chicago and New York Smelting Company, was destroyed by fire last Tuesday week.—Fairplay Sentinel.

A Hayes and Wheeler Club has been organized in El Moro and is in a flourishing condition. The club has ordered a large campaign banner, to be suspended over the street at their hall.

Messrs. Laughlin & Sullivan, of Central, are about to start the Gilpin County Post, and for that purpose have purchased the material used by the Fort Collins Standard, which is discontinued.

Work has been resumed on the Pulaski at Georgetown. The upper tunnel has been reopened, and fifty tons are to be taken out for a test run in the Silver Plume concentration works.

At the concentration works, Lake City, Messrs. Crook Bros. have been putting in an additional crusher, and will be ready to start up in a few days. Building is going on as lively as ever.

The Specie Payment Lode in Gilpin County continues its excellent production. The yield during July from the shaft alone was about 70 tons, which returned 93 ounces of gold, worth about $1,700.

The San Juan Prospector says: We understand that Mr. W. H. Van Gieson purposes putting up chlorination works at Lake City, and has already ordered the works from the foundry at Central City.

The Register Lode at Central is reported to be doing remarkably well. This was to be expected, for it is one of the finest veins in the country, and in former times had good standing among the great veins of that camp.

Judge Belden says Hon. Fred. Kruse is one of the luckiest miners in the country. The vein on the Quinard is improving day by day, and the ore yields eight ounces in the mill. The Ellery is yielding about five ounces.—Central Register.

J. C. Abbott has brought to town several samples of winter wheat raised by him this year. The berry is of good size and well filled out. The yield will average twenty five bushels to the acre, and it is not troubled with rust.—Greeley Sun.

The Longmont Ute says: Several thousand cedars have already been put in circulation from grain sold. Most farmers are holding wheat for two cents per pound. Appearances now are that very little grain will be sold at lower figures.

The Lake County Republican Convention nominated Thomas Welsh for Representative to the State Legislature, and the Democrats have placed in nomination for the same position Wm. McDermott, both of whom are old residents of Lake County.

We understand, says the Avalanche, that Jennings Bros. have recently made some excellent discoveries up on the Gunnison. They have one three foot silver edge assaying $1,106 per ton; and two others assaying respectively 430 and 570 ounces per ton silver.

The Norton Bros. have sold a half interest in the Ohio Lode, situate in the Sangre de Christo mines, to H. . Brother, of St. Louis, for $5,000. Mr. Brother has gone to St. Louis for a mill, which he will put up to work the ore from the mine.—Saguache Chronicle.

We learn from the Indian that the workmen running the one hundred foot level from the main shaft of the Pocahontas struck the lode at the depth of three hundred feet recently. It is expected that quite a large number of the old miners will soon resume work on the mine.

We have been shown, say the La Plata Miner, a specimen of crystallized ruby silver about as large as a man's thumb, taken from the Yankee Boy, on Mount Sneffels. It is about as rare and rich a specimen of silver ore as we have ever seen. It will be sent to the Centennial.

Trang, the chromo painter, has just published a series of six views of Colorado scenery, the original paintings being by Mrs. . A. Chase, of Denver. The views comprise Pike's Peak, Gray's Peak, Twin Lakes, Grand Lake, Rainbow Falls, Ute Pass, and Boulder Falls and Boulder Cañon.

Mr. A. D. Wilson, of Hayden's Geological Survey, has lately succeeded in completing a series of very important observations from the summits of the highest mountain peaks in Southern Colorado. The impression now is that the Sierra Blanco, near Fort Garland, is the highest mountain in Colorado.

We are informed, from parties that we know to be reliable, says the Index, that the Humboldt and Virginia mining companies have perfected arrangements for putting up works at this place, and from present indications we may reasonably expect to see the works commenced within the next thirty days.

As we go to press, says the Fairplay Sentinel of the 7th, we learn of a rich gold strike near the old town of Montgomery. The quartz is literally covered with the precious metal, and the claim from which the specimens were taken is said to be large and well defined. Jand R. B. Chappe is one of the fortunate owners.

The discovery of lead in Lake County, noticed some weeks ago, has developed, we are credibly informed, to a bonanza of the largest kind. The openings already made show the most extensive deposit of almost pure carbonate of lead ever discovered in this country. The nature of the lode is of the character of coal and iron deposits of flat contact form, with a dip into the mountain of about 15°. The property has been proven for 4,000 feet in some twelve different places by means of eves driven at nearly right angles to the strike and dip of the lode. It was supposed the lode was from twelve to fifteen feet in thickness, but one eve driven across the lode shows a thickness of 60 feet, the head being driven through solid mineral of great purity the entire 40 feet. Several hundred tons have been smelted, the value of the ore (about one-fourth of the mine), 50 to 55 per cent. lead, 12 to 15 ounces silver, while the soft ore (three-fourths of the mineral) runs 60 to 70 per cent. lead, and about the same amount silver.—Mining Review.

The railroad ticket agents in convention at New York on Saturday made a reduction of 10 per cent. on the present rates on centennial tickets to New York and Philadelphia from all points west of Chicago and St. Louis. This makes in all a reduction of 35 per cent. from regular rates.

Gen. Sherman stated recently that the Indian trouble would be settled up this Winter by whipping the Indians into a lasting peace. Ample preparations are being made for an active campaign against them. It is probable that a new department will be organized in the Northwest with Gen. Miles in command.

A fatal explosion occurred at the government works at Tell Gate on the morning of the 5th, by which three men were killed outright, and a number of others were more or less wounded, some seriously. A number of men were employed on a large fixing primers for the final explosion, when a premature explosion occurred.

General Crook has been heard from under date of the 2d. He has followed the trail to the Little Missouri without finding any Indians. The trail was found to split in several directions. Crook thinks the southern band may have moved backward toward the mountains, and he is somewhat apprehensive for his wagon train. It is expected that he will move in that direction.

General Sherman and family and Secretary-of-War Cameron and daughters are en route to inspect Western forts. They will go to Denver, Cheyenne, Fort D. A. Russell, and San Francisco. On their return they will visit all posts along the route in Nevada and Utah. They will also go from San Francisco to Los Angelos, in Southern California. They expect to reach Washington again about the 18th of October.

A Paris correspondent telegraphs: "Fresh disaster has befallen the Egyptian army in Abyssinia. Fifteen hundred Egyptian troops, with their commander, Rahibe Pacha, have been massacred. The garrison and government officials escaped on board some ships which happened to be in port, and arrived safely in Suez. The Egyptian government is sending fresh troops to the scene of action."

William M. Tweed and his cousin, William Hunt, have been arrested in Port Vigo, on board the Spanish merchantman Carmen. Tweed was traveling under the name Secor. For the present Tweed is confined on the Isle of Simon, Vigo Bay, where he is undergoing quarantine, strictly watched by a custom house guard. At the expiration of his quarantine he will be surrendered to the United States representative. As there are no direct steamers between Spain and North America Tweed will be sent to Cuba and from there to New York.

Jack McCall, or Sutherland, the man who killed Wild Bill at Deadwood, has been arrested in Laramie City by Deputy Marshal Bascombe. He was taken to Cheyenne for examination before United States Commissioner Turner, when, if the evidence against him be sufficient, he will be sent to await a requisition from the Governor of Dakota, and be taken to Yankton for trial for his crime. McCall admits that Wild Bill never killed a brother of his, but that he killed Wild Bill because he snatched a card from him during the progress of a game between them.

The fourth annual Inter-State Industrial Exposition opened at Chicago on the 6th, about 23,000 people being present. Every niche of the immense exposition building is occupied or spoken for, and the display in every department is immense. The magnificent art gallery contains 700 paintings contributed by individuals for the occasion, being worth in the aggregate $250,000. It is the finest collection ever made in the West. The fruit department attracts much attention, and the Pacific Slope makes a fine showing there. The exposition will continue several weeks.

On Thursday week a party of armed men entered the First National Bank at Northfield, Rice County, Minn., and ordered the cashier, H. M. Haywood, with a knife at his throat, to open the vault, at the same time ordering all the persons in the bank, the assistant cashier and three others, to hold up their hands. Haywood refused to open the vault, and was shot dead by a pistol placed against his temple. A number of the townspeople coming to the rescue, a fight ensued, in which two of the robbers were killed outright and one wounded. The remainder escaped, taking with them the wounded man. No money was taken save a handful of nickels from the cashier's drawer, which were thrown to the floor.

The death is announced in Vienna of Mme. Hulsenstein, formerly maid of honor to Maria Theresa, at the well-authenticated age of 119.

W. D. Howells, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, is engaged in writing a life of Gov. Hayes, which will be published shortly by Hurd & Houghton.

Janauschek has given orders to buy a residence in America, as she will not return any more to Europe, "but make," as she writes, "dear America her home."

The Empress Eugenie will pass the coming Winter in Rome. She has purchased for her residence the villa of the Grand Duchess Maria, of Russia, in that city.

May Davenport, a daughter of E. L. Davenport, is to have a part in "Three Days," the new comedy to be produced at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia.

Zion Church, Montreal, has extended a call at $4,000 gold, a year, to the Rev. Mr. Bray, of Manchester, England, a young clergyman who preached at Plymouth Church lately.

Miss Susan B. Anthony is spending some weeks with Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, at Tenafly, N. J., for the purpose of writing a history of the women's suffrage movement for Johnson's Encyclopedia.

Gen. Harrison, of Indiana, the papers say, is greeted by his old soldiers, who have often known him to dismount, place some sick or footsore man in the saddle, and trudge along in the mud carrying some tired fellow's musket or knapsack.

President Grant's income as a farmer is nothing wonderful. It is reported that his farm has required a yearly outgo of $10,000 beyond receipts. It is now rented to two different persons for $2,500 a year. The net income, however, is only $1,500, for the taxes amount to $800.

There is said to be much feeling in Paris in consequence of the social distinction which has lately been awarded the Prince Imperial at the British Court. At an entertainment lately given by the Prince of Wales, the "young man" had the post of honor in the leading quadrille, the Princess of Wales being his partner. This quadrille may yet have a place in history.

"Raconteur," of the Arcadian, writes from London that "Mrs. Rousby recently met with a rather severe accident. It is her daily habit to ride in the park, and being a skillful equestrienne, she attracts no little attention. One day lately her horse shied, reared, and fell. It was a very narrow escape, but Mrs. Rousby fortunately got off with a severely bruised foot and ankle.

The Spanish papers make a great noise over the death of the Cuban leader called the "Inglesito," not long ago reported. They describe him as an American, about twenty-five years old, and uncommonly bold and skillful. The Epoca states that he was some time ago captured and ordered to be shot with a squad of other prisoners. He fell, but not mortally wounded, and keeping perfectly quiet, contrived to make his escape.

Miss Emma Abbott has been paid a high compliment by M. Gounod. She sang for him while he played the accompaniment. When she had finished Gounod rose from the piano and took her by both hands. He said, "Miss Abbott, you have sung my song better than I ever heard it sung!" He then took from a drawer an elegant bound copy of "Faust," "My child," said he, "I want you to accept this from me." Seating himself at his table, he took a pen and wrote in the frontispiece:—

TO MISS EMMA ABBOTT,
FROM CHARLES GOUNOD.
In token of Miss Abbott's singing for him, this day, the Jewel Song from "Faust," better than he has ever heard it sung.
CHARLES GOUNOD.

The will left by the late Speaker Kerr devises that all his law books shall be held in trust by his wife for the use of his son. He leaves all his property, real and personal, to his wife during her life, his son to succeed. He concludes by most earnestly beseeching his son to cherish always a sincere love of justice and truth, and to make all his aims in life consistent therewith, and they cannot fail to be high and noble. He makes his wife sole executrix of his will. The paper is dated May 26, 1865.

Of Gov. Hayes, Dr. Tefft says in the Northern Border: There is one fact which we can not forbear to state. Though not a professor of religion, so far as we know, he has maintained the beautiful habit of reading the Scriptures night and morning in his family; and after the chapter is read they all kneel down and repeat the Lord's Prayer, as if they believed in God's providence and goodness for guidance and protection. Should he and his estimable wife have the fortune of taking possession of the White House, we are morally certain that each day will be opened and closed in the same manner.

Mr. Conway, in a letter to the Cincinnati Commercial, thus describes a famous French leader: "Gambetta is very Jewish in type. He has a strong aquiline nose, a heavy brow, a swarthy complexion, and straight black hair. He is considerably under the average height, and thick-set almost to portliness. He has a good flexible voice, and is very simple and direct in speech. His only gesture was to raise his large hands occasionally about three inches above the desk of the tribune, and then bring them down again. In dress he is rather slovenly, being entirely without the usual jaunty air of the Parisian."

Lucia Zarate, the most diminutive person in existence, has been on exhibition in Atlanta, Ga. The Constitution, of that city, thus speaks of her: She is but twenty inches high, weighs but five pounds, and is now over twelve years of age. To give an adequate description of this dwarf is almost a matter of impossibility, but when we say that the celebrated Tom Thumb, of world-wide reputation, is thirteen inches taller and weighs fifteen times as much as Lucia, it will give our readers a faint idea of her extreme diminutiveness—in fact she is not larger than the good sized dolls babies which are exhibited daily in our stores.
